LEGAL BATTLES; BEST
HOPE IN GOVERNOR

Hoffman Remains Enigmatic
Background

MAY GIVE REPRIEVE

Lawyers Prepare to Exhaust
Legal Maneuvers to Save
Man From Chair

By James L. Kilgallen
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 15.—(INS)—With Bruno Richard Hauptmann losing eleventh-hour legal battles to stave off his electrocution set for eight o'clock Friday night, the condemned man's brightest hope today still seemed to be Governor Harold G. Hoffman. The question of the hour was: "What will Governor Hoffman do?" No one knew. The Governor remained the enigmatic figure in the background. Yet in face of his continued silence the rumor went not down that he intends to grant Hauptmann a 30-day reprieve.

Hauptmann's five lawyers, meanwhile, prepared to exhaust every legal maneuver to save the convicted kidnapper of the Lindbergh baby from the chair. They had determined upon two moves.

1. Taking their legal battle to the Third Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia.

2. Putting the issue up to the Supreme Court of the United States.

The Hauptmann lawyers were visibly depressed by the action of Federal Judge J. Warren Davis of the Circuit Court here in denying the application of Hauptmann for a writ of habeas corpus. But, after a conference late last night, they decided to go before the Third Circuit of Appeals at Philadelphia and appeal Judge Davis' decision.

Failing in this, their next recourse would be the United States Supreme Court.

Federal Judge Davis, in denying the habeas corpus motion, declared that any other action by him would "in effect be reversing the United States Supreme Court." He also denied a motion for permission to appeal and a stay pending the appeal.

Despite this blow to Hauptmann's hopes there still remained the prospect that Governor Hoffman who frankly is not convinced Hauptmann is the actual kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby, might announce a reprieve at any time.

Credence was lent this belief by the assertion of Attorney General David T. Wilentz to members of the Legislature's appropriations committee that he was informed "on good authority that the Governor would reprieve Hauptmann." Wilentz indicated to them he would need additional funds to combat this action.

In further substantiation of the reprieve rumors was a statement attributed to William S. Conklin, the Governor's secretary, that no steps will be taken to force Dr. John F. Condon to return from his South American cruise "because he will be back in plenty of time."

Conklin, however, has repeatedly declared he has no idea what the Governor will do on the question of a reprieve.

The records of the State of New Jersey show that on fourteen occasions reprieves have been granted by Governors in murder cases.

CANDIDATE ROOSEVELT INTERVIEWS
PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

By Benjamin DeCasseres
(In New York American, January 5, 1936)

CANDIDATE ROOSEVELT: Good morning, Mr. President. PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT: Good morning, Candidate Roosevelt.

CANDIDATE ROOSEVELT: I think it advisable, in view of the fact that I am going to run again for President in 1936, that I should deliver a speech or two in which I will pledge myself to cut down taxes about five hundred million dollars.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT: Well, my dear Candidate, you may do as you please about that, but my budget for next year calls for about five thousand million dollars MORE.

CANDIDATE ROOSEVELT: That will never do, Mr. President. How am I going before the country with a pledge of reduced taxes if you are going to try to raise billions more by taxes?

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT: That is YOUR job, Candidate Roosevelt. You have always been a good promiser.

CANDIDATE ROOSEVELT: Unfortunately, they remember what I said in 1932 about reducing taxes, abolishing unnecessary bureaus and commissions, pulling down the national debt, balancing the budget, strict maintenance of State rights and a lot of other things which, my dear Mr. President, I'd like to forget this year. I'm afraid I can't put that over again in view of your late $10,000,000,000 Congress, your multiplication of bureaus, your colossal taxation and the rise in the price of foodstuffs.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT: Tell the dear people that their happy faces are proof positive that these taxes have done them a lot of good and that the rise in the prices of food has made them fat.

CANDIDATE ROOSEVELT: Isn't that rather pulling a fast one, as Brother Farley might say?

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT: Not if you keep laughing. I find that happy laughter covers a multitude of taxes, bureaus and unconstitutional measures.

CANDIDATE ROOSEVELT: No, I'm afraid that won't work this time. I've got to think up something brand-new.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT: Well, then, why not point out to them that there are ONLY nine million people without work?

CANDIDATE ROOSEVELT: But suppose they discover that besides the nine million people out of work after you have been three years in office they are also supporting 9,000,000 persons on the Federal payrolls, whereas in March, 1933, there were only 2,000,000?

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT: Never mind facts—just keep laughing gayly and tell them if you are re-elected you will end poverty in America forever by reducing the rich to a bricklayer's income; then quote them a bit of "Macbeth."

CANDIDATE ROOSEVELT: I don't think many of the voters read "Macbeth."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT: My dear Candidate, why bother me with your hair-splitting? Your job is easy. All you have to do is PROMISE.

CANDIDATE ROOSEVELT: Be that as it may, there is, Mr. President, the little matter of that platform that I was elected on in 1932 to explain. It was dumped in the Potomac. Do you think I can fish it out?

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT: Let it lie in the Potomac. Don't you yet understand that a platform is merely something to stand on temporarily? You can't use it for anything else.

CANDIDATE ROOSEVELT: Other things trouble me, too. How am I going to explain the Communistic speeches of Brothers Ickes and Tugwell?

SNOW REMOVAL CREWS BUSIEST FOR 8 YEARS

Winter's Pre-Schedule Arrival of Unusual Severity,
Complicates Task

STARTED NOVEMBER 17

HARRISBURG, Jan. 15.—Snow removal crews of the Department of Highways are experiencing their busiest winter in the eight years since this service was inaugurated in 1927, according to records of work up to the first of the year made public today by Secretary Warren VanDyke.

Winters' pre-schedule arrival, unusual severity and the responsibilities of increased mileage on the snow program have combined to complicate the task.

First snow removal of the present season became necessary November 17 and from that time until January 1, department workers removed snow or spread chinders somewhere in the State on all except nine days. During that time 63,460 men were required for the work which extended to each of the State's sixty-seven counties.

These winter safety measures which have brought Pennsylvania national attention were necessary every day during December, with only two exceptions.

The storm of December 29 brought out the greatest single force—3889 men, an all-time record for department snow removal. This storm, which blanketed the State in snow up to a

ELLWOOD G. MINSTER
DIES; ILL LESS THAN ONE WEEK

Deceased Was Native of Bristol and Very Well Known

ACTIVE IN FRATERNITIES

Past Exalted Ruler of Elks and Past Dictator of Moose

Ellwood G. Minster died at his home in Pine Grove, here, last night, shortly after 10 o'clock. He had been ill in bed since Wednesday, when he was attacked with a heavy cold. His condition since then had been critical, with occasionally an improvement, giving slight hopes that he might be able to combat the complication which developed. The seriousness of Mr. Minster's condition became apparent at once and he was placed in an oxygen tent at his home. Three physicians and a nurse kept close watch over the patient.

Mr. Minster was a prominent business man, and was well known throughout the community. He was a native of Bristol, being born here August 11, 1893. He was the son of the late Ellwood W. and Olivia Minster. He gained his early education in the Bristol schools, attended Swarthmore College and later entered the ice manufacturing business with his father, upon whose death in September, 1922, he succeeded to the management of the enterprise. He continued as manager of the Artesian Ice Company until a few years ago when the ice manufacturing end of the business was disposed of and the company re-incorporated as the Artesian Products Company, dealing in coal and building materials. Mr. Minster continued as treasurer and manager of the company which he had successfully developed. Mr. Minster had but a few months ago ventured into the automobile business when he organized the Bucks County Sales and Service, taking over the Ford agency in Bristol.

The deceased was active in Bristol Lodge, No. 970, B. P. O. E., of which he was a past exalted ruler, and in Bucks Lodge, No. 1169, Loyal Order of Moose, of which he was a past dictator. He was a charter member of the Bristol Rotary Club, and a member of the Bristol Consolidated Fire Department. Politically, Mr. Minster was exceedingly active, and was a staunch Republican. He exhibited much of the keenness and political sagacity of his father, who was a dominant figure in Bucks County politics for many years.

Mr. Minster had a host of friends attracted to him by his kindly disposition. He was of a charitable and generous nature.

Mr. Minster came of an old Pennsylvania family, his earliest progenitor in this country being Nicholas Minster, who migrated from Germany and settled in Chester County, Pa.

The deceased is survived by his wife, Julia Givler Minster.

The funeral service, which will be private, will be conducted at the Minster home, Friday, at two o'clock. Burial in Bristol Cemetery will be conducted by the H. S. Rue Estate, funeral directors. Friends may call Thursday evening; and lodges with which the deceased was affiliated are invited to conduct their services Thursday evening.

Settlement Reached And Their Suit Is Ended

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 15.—When terms of settlement had been agreed upon after the case had started trial, a juror was withdrawn and the case of The R. C. Maxwell Company, a corporation, against Benjamin Foster Company, a corporation, was continued, pending final settlement.

That was the only case in the Grand Jury room Monday at the opening of the January term of civil and equity court. The plaintiff sued for damages alleged to have resulted when a large sign owned by them was destroyed during the construction of the new Lincoln Highway near Morrisville.

What promises to be a long, drawn-out case, got under way in civil court when the case of RobRoy S. Converse, of New York City, against Allen L. Hawse, defendant, of Richmond, Va., and Emma C. Herd, Doylestown Trust Company, Webster Grim and Cora M. Peck, garnishees, was called for trial. The plaintiff is represented by Thomas Ross and John Ross, of Doylestown, while the defendant is represented by Howard I. James, of Bristol, and Murray L. McGuire, of Richmond, Va.

The case is a foreign attachment in assumpsit, and involves a dispute over an amount of $1120 now on certificate of deposit in a Doylestown bank.

Judges Keller and Boyer announced the appointment of a Board of Viewers for the Bucks County Home for 1935 as follows: Clifford L. Anderson, Bristol; Henry C. Detweiler, Quakertown; Mrs. Martha D. Mercer, Doylestown; and Mrs. Eva K. Preston, Solebury Township.

DURABLE GOODS

We wish the labor department would abandon its statistical division of industry between "durable goods" and "non-durable goods." Employment and production statistics would be much more revealing if the government had used from the beginning the classifications, "producers' goods" and "consumers' goods," in use by some private statistical agencies.

The latter classification really means something. It divides industries between:

1—Those that produce goods consumed by other industries to make more goods, and,

2—Those that make things for use by consumers.

It is not a perfect division, but at least it roughly separates goods involving the investment of capital from goods bought directly out of consumers' incomes, which is the division of greater interest in these times.

So far as we can see, the labor department's classification means little or nothing. It informs us currently that employment in the durable goods group—which includes, of course, the hitherto lagging "heavy" industries—now has increased to an index of 76, whereas the index for other industry is 94.3. This is interesting but, we are informed, "durable goods" by the department's definition includes such things as passenger automobiles and electric refrigerators.

Both of these last are consumers' goods industries and both, very markedly, have not participated in the "lag" which has characterized the producers' goods industries in the recovery from the depression.

Passenger automobiles are durable enough, as a glance at any used car lot will disclose. But so is a can-opener durable. We fail to see what statistical use is served by not classifying autos with other goods made for sale to consumers.

SAVED BY AIRPLANE

Joe Crosson, aviator who flew from Fairbanks to Juneau and back again to fetch serum with which to combat a scarlet fever epidemic, declines to be enrolled as a hero. Although the temperature ranged from 40 to 50 degrees below zero, he says it was "a routine flight."

The credit then should go partially to men who developed an airplane that can fly at such temperatures; that can cross over mountain ranges without faltering; that can perform steadily for hours at 70 or 80 degrees below the temperature at which water freezes. And something should be said for men who perfected lubrication which functions at such low levels of the thermometer.

Twenty years ago Fairbanks would have fought its epidemic as best it could. Ten years ago Joe Crosson's flight would have been extra-hazardous and well-nigh impossible. Today men can live and thrive well above the Arctic Circle, knowing that they have two servants, radio and airplane, that can bring them help when they need it urgently.

Strange parents! They spend fifteen years acting like slaves to a princess and then blame the girl for thinking they are.

Some mornings we arise feeling sufficiently like giving up to join the Townsend Plan.

During this period largely through his ability, interest and activity the company was instrumental in solving a number of crimes committed against its members and bringing the criminals to justice. ## Hauptmann Losing Legal Battles; Best Hope In Gov.

Hauptmann's lawyers offered no new evidence in their petition before Federal Judge Davis for a writ of habeas corpus. Consequently the Judge felt constrained to reject the motion.

The action before Davis was dramatic. The petition had been signed by Hauptmann himself in his cell. From the prison the defense lawyers, C. Lloyd Fisher, Frederick A. Pope, E. Herbert Rosecrans, Neil Burkinshaw and Nugent Dodds, the latter two newly acquired attorneys from Washington, went to the Federal Court.

Before hearing the petition Judge

Davis said the presence of Attorney General Wilentz would be necessary. Wilentz came, accompanied by Joseph Lanigan and Robert Stockton, assistant attorney generals, and Captain John J. Lamb of the New Jersey State Police.

Burkinshaw presented the petition for the defense. Its principal allegation was that Hauptmann was exposed to "an overwhelming mob spirit" during his trial in Flemington a year ago.

This "mob spirit," it was contended, deprived Hauptmann of his constitutional rights by causing conviction without "due process of law."

The jury, the petition alleged, was "exposed and subjected to hostile influences" by being incompletely sequestered and the result was the jurors frequently heard the expressions of the crowd.

"HIGH SCHOOL TRAGEDY"

by MAXINE CANTY

SYNOPSIS

Julie Martin, at 17, becomes an "inside" observer of the police in a investigation of the murder of her former French teacher, the pretty Constance ("Connie") Sinclair who had been shot dead in her apartment by a party thus far unknown. Julie is on the "inside" because after school hours she is office assistant to Principal Perkins and the latter has detailed her as stenographer for Police Inspector O'Brien, who is busy examining suspects and others. Among those questioned, or wanted for questioning, are Julie herself and her boyfriend, Dicky Ward, who was with her when she returned a pen to "Connie" a few hours before the tragedy; Mrs. Sardoni, manager of the apartment house in which "Connie" was killed; Principal Perkins; Melvin Wright, the school's "problem boy"; Hym, a Filipino janitor, who had been discharged for insolence to "Connie" and who was missing since her death; Bruce Lloyd, her former fiance, who refuses to say where he was on the murder night; and George Carrington, also reported to be a former suitor, who is now married. The latter seems to have a perfect alibi for the fatal night but he admits to the police that his wife has been missing since that evening. Julie's father has become counsel for Lloyd. The authorities are anxious to get in touch with Mrs. Carrington, as Julie proceeds with her "inside" story:

CHAPTER VII

Well, I must say that things looked rather bad for Mrs. Carrington the next morning. Even my mother pursed her lips when Dad read about her in the morning paper. Of course, I had said nothing about it to the family the night before as I couldn't betray the trust the Inspector seemed to have in me. I do not know when anything has thrilled me so much as to think a big, important detective had confided in me, as it were.

I even resisted the impulse to tell the kids at school about it, although it was a struggle, especially when Helen assumed the "I-told-you-so" attitude about Mrs. Carrington. Most of the girls thought her disappearance settled everything; they were ready right then to sentence her. But I had learned from my brief contact with the detective methods of the Inspector not to be sure on mere appearances.

"I don't think," I said, "that her disappearing shows she is guilty. It might be that she was just mad at George for being away all day Sunday."

"And mad at Connie for keeping him," added Helen. "Don't forget that she had a pretty good idea where he was after talking to Connie the week before."

"Maybe she even followed him to St. Joseph!" exclaimed Patsy. "Well, if she were so murderous, why did she wait until Thursday night to kill her then?" As I asked the question I felt pretty triumphant.

Helen spoiled it by saying, "Perhaps she's the kind of person who doesn't act impulsively, but broods over things until she gets kind of crazy about them. This is what I think happened: Mrs. Carrington was furious when she left Connie after their row, but she had a long way to drive since they live in Burlington; by the time she reached home, she decided to see what effect her visit would have before she pounced on George. But Sunday he left her again for the whole day practically, and she made up her mind to find out about it. Of course, she probably had to take the train, as he had the car. She may not have arrived here until after dark. Perhaps she went to the cafe across the street from Connie's apartment and toyed with her food while she watched for George's car to appear."

As Helen related this her eyes glowed with the excitement of a story teller, and most of the girls listened breathlessly when she went on:

"Then Connie and Mrs. Carrington's husband drove up. You know Connie says something in her letter to him about a scene in the car. I'll bet he made love to her right there, and his wife saw it. So she sort of stumbled away in the dark and went somewhere to nurse her wounds. Only, instead of nursing them, she brooded over them until she came back late Thursday night and shot the other woman!"

"You make it sound like one of those old Biograph movies they drag out and show once in a while," I commented. The other girls looked at me reproachfully; they had loved it. I must admit it was surprising how much of Helen's melodrama proved true later, though.

Before they could jump all over me for being catty, the warning bell rang. We had to scurry to make our classes. So it was lunch time before we talked again. Mrs. Carrington was the only topic of conversation. I did not listen too much for I was wondering about the book, and what the Inspector had found out about it.

I did not have to wait long to Miss Sinclair. They were quite impressed by my importance I could see; even Helen was respectful to me. We went on into the building, past the principal's office on our way to our lockers. The door burst open, and Mr. Perkins' pale face looked out.

"Miss Martin," he said to me, although he always called me Julie, "I would like to speak to you." "I'll tell anyone who asked that I was scared. For all I knew I might be walking into the murderer's den! It was certain I was walking into the principal's office, and that's enough to sober any high school student. He was very stern and whiter than usual."

"Perhaps Mrs. Carrington went to the cafe across the street from Connie's home . . . to watch George's car parked outside?" . . .

know. As the five of us came across the street to the high school after lunch, the Inspector came out of the main door. He saw me and waited. Did my heart pound as he called to me in front of all the kids on the grounds? I was simply the cynosure of all eyes as I went to speak to him.

"Well, Miss Julie," he began, "I have talked to Miss Sass and Miss Whelton. They don't seem to know much about the book, except that Miss Sass thinks she remembers seeing it that afternoon just as you do."

He paused a minute. "You have kept all this to yourself?" "Yes, sir." "Keep it up, Julie. You may be able to help me. I have an appointment with Mr. Perkins this afternoon after school. If you can find anything to do in the office, you might stick around."

"Yes, sir." "Perkins seems to be out now. I'll be back. And by the way, did you know that Perkins and Miss Sinclair were friends, outside of school, I mean?"

"No, sir." "Hm. Miss Whelton says that he called to see her fairly often. Now mind what you are to show me: you can keep your eyes open and your ears open and your mouth shut tight."

"Oh, I will, sir!"

He smiled. "Goodbye, Miss Julie."

I tried to look nonchalant as I joined the girls at the door, but my heart was pounding inside. To think that the Inspector trusted me enough to tell me the inside dope on the high school teachers! I felt almost solemn about my responsibilities, for I realized that I not only had to guard his trust, but that I might even stumble across the solution of the mystery!

The girls were simply ga-ga naturally and my first job was to throw them off the trail. I just told them he had questioned me some more about the call Dicky and I made on fought 22, and C. Clifford Beck was on hand for 14.

Doylestown Fireman At Majority of Fires

Fire Chief Frank Stover has twelve to his credit and Assistant Chief Herbert Leatherman responded four times. Of the 38 fires, the smallest number in years, only 15 took place within the County Seat. The remaining 23 were fires which happened in the rural sections.

The largest loss during the past year was that suffered by Horace P. High, Monument restaurant proprietor, whose home on Linden avenue would have been destroyed except for the quick arrival of firemen after flames had gutted the basement. Considerable damage was done to the paint and wall paper in the house, including draperies and curtains, but the entire loss did not exceed $300.

According to C. Clifford Beck, who served as statistician, there were 13 fires in houses; one garage, near Danboro almost destroyed; five chimney fires; four automobiles; seven grass; one rubbish; one electric motor; a hayrick and four barns.

Fires in houses ranged in origin from the explosion of an oil stove, which could not be avoided and the playing of children with matches. An oil burner was responsible for one fire in an apartment house.

The greatest number of fires occurred in December with ten alarms being answered. Only one fire happened in November and May, and there were six months—January, February, June, July, August and September—in which only two fires were recorded for each month.

April and October both have five to their credit, and March, with four, completes the list.

Brighter Days are Gifts of Utility Service

The real function of Utility Service is to make life more satisfactory, more productive, more liveable! This thought, highly appropriate to the Holiday season, is found expressed in all phases of the Service.

The Yule log, the mistletoe, the picturesque sleigh have appeal for all of us, yet ours is a far more desirable day than were the olden times to which they relate. That, we feel, is the modern message of the holidays.

BRISTOL HIGH QUINTET ANNEXES THIRD STRAIGHT LEAGUE FRAY

In a wild free-for-all game in which the contestants came to near blows quite frequently, the Red and Gray colors of Bristol high school flew high again as the localites scored an 18 to 12 victory over the big Yellow of Yardley on the local court last night.

This victory marked the third consecutive victory in League competition for the Doughertymen, and thus places them in first place undisputedly of the Lower Bucks Co. Conference.

The Cardinals started off with a bang when Hughes got the tap and P. Zefferi passed to Carnvale, who hit the cords for a twin-pointer. This was the first, last and only score of the first quarter, however, as the passing on both teams was sloppy and slowed up the game to a point, where the only action was between players who roughed it up frequently.

The second quarter also was slow as the passing continued to be wild and with both teams missing many field and foul goals, thus keeping the score low. The visitors, however, managed to score a pair of double deckers while the Bunnies could only tally one field goal. Therefore the half ended at 4-4.

The boys got busy in the third quarter, however, and with fast passing the locals ran off three field goals and a quartet of foul goals to register 14 points at the end of the period. The Yellow and Black could only get a pair of twin-pointers.

The millions of Dougherty hopped off to an 8-4 advantage early in period but Yardley retaliated with a couple of double deckers to bring them to within two points of Red and Gray, who led 10-8. They continued to add points, however, and the quarter ended with the locals ahead, 14-8, when "Nick" Huffnell hit the cords from almost mid-floor as the period ended.

He also started the final period with a duplicate double-decker from practically the same spot, giving the league leaders a 16-8 advantage. This was quickly reduced, however, when Powell and Tomlinson netted twin-pointers in succession to bring the score up to 16-12. The game ended a few seconds after Phil Carnvale hit the cords for two points to bring the final score up to 18-12.

Snow Removal Crews Busiest For 8 Years

depth of twenty-three inches in the mountains of the southwestern section, brought out workers in every county.

Sub-zero temperatures and frequent driftings have added to the hardships of the snow patrol. Forseeing these possibilities, Secretary VanDyke has issued special bulletins on the prevention or treatment of frost bite.

This season's snow removal program is the most ambitious ever undertaken by the Department, calling for the clearance of 15,000 miles of highways at a cost of nearly $3,000,000. Major routes and connecting links predominate the program although 2500 miles of rural road are included.

Elaborate preparations are necessary so that this work may move with dispatch when a storm strikes. Cinders are placed in strategic spots and snow plows are stored conveniently along major highways. Constant watch is kept and maintenance foremen advise county offices as soon as cindering is necessary.

The snow patrol is begun when the fall reaches a depth of two inches and strict orders have been issued to clear all rail flanges after plowing out a grade crossing to avoid the possibility of derailments resulting from ice.

Eastern and southeastern counties have had the least snow to battle, while District No. 1—Crawford, Erie, Forest, Mercer, Warren and Venango counties—have had the most.

He also reported that during the year 1935 the local department answered 11 alarms. They are listed as follows:

Candidate Roosevelt Interviews President Roosevelt

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT: Announce that the GENERAL WELFARE requires a new social order, that everything before I became President was horse-and-buggy stuff.

CANDIDATE ROOSEVELT: But, my dear President, they didn't believe that at all in Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York and Pennsylvania.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT: Backward and unintelligent States! More money should be spent in those States to educate them.

CANDIDATE ROOSEVELT: But, again, will the public swallow glittering generalities with the undeniable fact that taxes ARE rising and the national debt IS $31,000,000,000 and pork and bread ARE going up?

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT: My dear Candidate, the public is not interested in details. It would rather have personal charm and beauty talks over the radio by our PWA.

CANDIDATE ROOSEVELT: Maybe; but what shall I say

February 22nd: On Kings farms, house occupied by George Whitlock.

March 6th: False alarm.

April 3rd: Fire in the cellar at the home of William Swangler, Main street.

April 14th: Fire in Lovett's woods near Emilie.

March 14th: Garage on the property of Joseph Monti.

July 5th: Call to the home of Charles Effinger, Edgely. Services not needed.

July 8th: Fire at high railroad bridge owned by P. R. R.

November 3rd: Grass fire near Edgely Iron Works.

November 16th: Grass fire in the grounds of old Tullytown Arsenal.

November 28th: Grass fire in old arsenal grounds.

December 29th: Chimney fire on William Reed place on Mill Creek Road.

President Johnson deferred the appointment of new committees until the next meeting, and the old committees were asked to serve until then. The firemen are making plans for many social events, and one of the largest of the season will be announced within a few days.

FALLSINGTON

Mrs. Evelyn Watson has been on the sick list.

Miss Ida Phipps, Hayes street, and Miss Lola McLaughlin, Pond street, spent Saturday and Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Boehringer, Newportville.

about your free trade policies and your plans to open the American market to the products of foreign cheap labor? American industry will not like that. American labor will not like that. The American farmer will not like that.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT: Well, they will have to like it. That is the essence of the New Deal. Protection belongs to the ox-cart days.

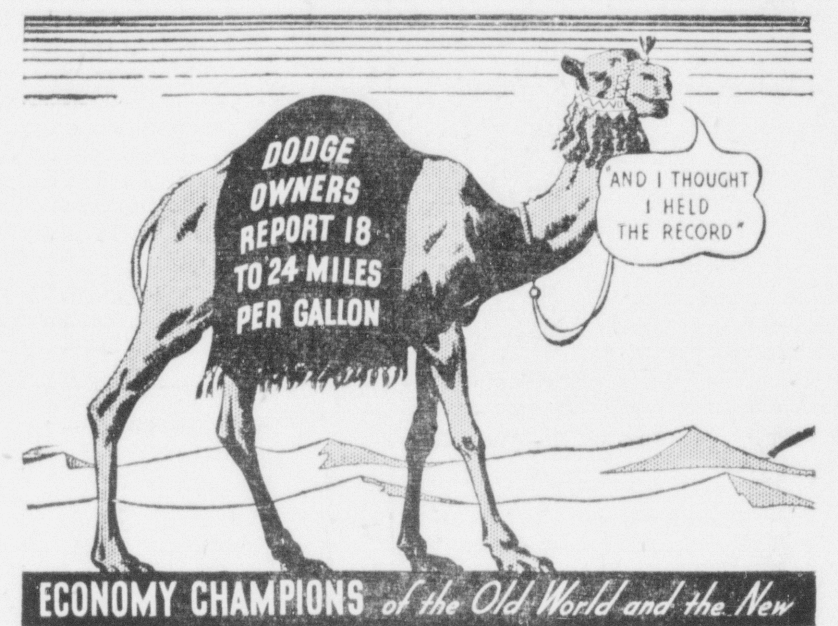

CANDIDATE ROOSEVELT: I suppose so. But what about your proposed emasculation of the Constitution and dilution of the Supreme Court? You know our people are strong for the Constitution and they think the Supreme Court has saved the nation.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT: Tell them that I have saved the nation; that the Constitution is effete; that Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln are back numbers; that American ideals and institutions belong to the past; that liberty is outmoded, individualism out of date. If they don't believe it, spend more money, spend more money.

CANDIDATE ROOSEVELT: All right, I'll see what Brother Farley can do for me.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT: Farley's your man. He has been educated in the practical politics of Tammany Hall. He is a scientific combination of the New Deal and the Slick Deal. He said I would not allow myself to be defeated, and he is right—not while the money holds out.

CANDIDATE ROOSEVELT: Happy New Year, Mr. President. I guess we are all right if we can keep up the taxing and keep up the spending. Bread and the circus made imperial Rome.
